THE FACTS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

- After school programs are proven to address issues and risk factors that lead to school dropout.
 - Students who participate in after school programs improve in key areas that foster success in school, including social and emotional development, increased interest and engagement in school, and avoidance of risky behaviors.
 - Students who attend after school programs consistently improve in reading and math grades.
 - The hours from 3 to 6 pm are the peak hours each day for at-risk behavior in young kids and teens.
 - Students who attend after school programs get more exercise, have more confidence in themselves, engage in positive social interaction and better understand the need for clearly defined limits to their behavior.
 - After school programs provide students with leadership opportunities.
 - After school programs help working families who need a safe place and supervision of children from 3 to 6 pm.
